‘By carrying out a strategic review with CT we have created a clear plan to build an IT system that is future-proofed and designed to meet our demands over the next 5 years. We are confident that by carrying out this exercise together we have proactively identified any potential risks and will be working together moving forwards to ensure we have continued reassurance of system availability and data security.’

CT began working with Bell & Buxton back in 2017. The highly respected Sheffield based law firm provides legal advice across many areas of personal and business law. They were at a stage in their business where they were reviewing all business processes which included the role technology played. The law firm was concerned about the security of their ageing systems and the significant number of strict regulations that relate to the protection of private and sensitive data. They needed an IT system that would support them in their future goals ensuring a resilient IT system was in place that was easy to maintain, monitor and was importantly scalable.

The strategic review allowed CT to work with Bell & Buxton to fully understand its business plans going forwards and identify areas in the IT system that required improvement to support their goals. It outlined the prioritisation of IT requirements in the short, medium and long term. For Bell and Buxton, it was immediately evident that by migrating their ageing systems to a cloud infrastructure, the law firm could address immediate back-up and disaster recovery concerns, security issues and the storage of unsecure servers. With a strong foundation in place, work continues to develop the IT infrastructure to facilitate the recent acquisition in 2020 of IronMonger Curtis Solicitors. As part of this, CT will continue to develop the highest levels of cyber security to ensure all systems are secure.

Charlotte Akpinar, Bell & Buxton, “We needed an IT system that would support our future business goals that was resilient, secure and importantly scalable. By carrying out this review we have created a clear plan to continue to build our IT system that will be able to meet our demands over the next few years and importantly help us drive growth.”
